Toby Threadgill (USA) and Kaki Kawano (Japan)

Dominating your Opponent through the Control of Initiative (Sente) and Distance (Maai)

Introduction

Toby Threadgill
Menkyo Kaiden Takamura ha Shindo Yoshin ryu

Kaki Kawano
5th Dan JKF Wado-Kai

Toby Threadgill is the kaicho of the Takamura ha Shindo Yoshin Kai and the only active jujutsu instructor in the world holding a Shindo Yoshin ryu menkyo kaiden. This koryu (classical) jujutsu school is a sogo bujutsu (comprehensive martial tradition) maintaining a significant weapons curriculum that reflects those embraced by the samurai warrior class (katana, tanto et al.). Shindo Yoshin ryu as a foundational art of Wado ryu karate contains within its curriculum many historical and technical insights for the contemporary wadoka.

Kaki Kawano lives in Kumamoto, Japan. He is an international experienced trainer and frequently kumite champion, among others Champion All National Tournament (Budokan in Tokyo), European Wado Championship (Sweden), All Australian Championship, Wado World Cup (England). Kaki Kawano will teach in unique ways to approach the learning and teaching of kumite principles.

The Seminar

Before the emergence of Hironori Ohtsuka and Wado ryu, methods of freestyle application of karate technique were virtually unheard of in Japan or Okinawa. In Edo Period Japan however, freestyle jujutsu competitions were common place. So, it was from the origins of jujutsu randori and shiai that Hironori Ohtsuka contemplated and then developed the earliest methods of karate jiyu-kumite. In the Samurai era when life and death existed at the end of a sword, the control of initiative and distance were paramount. Ohtsuka Sensei, uniquely educated in classical Budo, developed Wado ryu with an excellent insight, one based on combat not self-defense. To this end, Wado ryu is a true combat art, an art of the samurai, an art of strategy and domination.
